

LOST IN TRANSIT

*Inspired by the long abandoned

One of New York's oldest treasures, the City Hall stop was closed in 1945 due to the length of modern train cars which couldn't manage the station's curved platform. You can visit the station and admire its beautiful tilework and architecture by visiting the New York City Transit Museum, or by staying on the 6 train past its last stop as makes its way back uptown.
